2nd Call for Paper
The symposium, sponsored by ISCIIE and ASME, was initiated in 1986 and the title “Flexible Automation” was selected as a general term referring to automation technologies essential to meet the increasing requirements of modern manufacturing. The symposium, sponsored by ISCIIE and ASME, was initiated in 1986 and the title “Flexible Automation” was selected as a general term referring to automation technologies essential to meet the increasing requirements of modern manufacturing. The topics covered by ISFA 2014 include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Robotics
- Mechatronics
- Modeling and Control of Dynamical Systems
- Sensors and actuators
- Intelligent Transportation Systems
- Sustainable Green Engineering
- Manufacturing Systems
- CAD/CAM
- Precision Machinery Engineering
- Additive Manufacturing

Prof. Junichiro Kawaguchi (Japan Aerospace Exploration Agency (JAXA))
Yoshio Iriu, Ph.D. (Mitsubishi Electric Corporation)
Prof. David Dornfeld (University of California at Berkeley)
Pushkar Hingwe, Ph.D. (Intuitive Surgical, Inc.)

Program Committee is planning a wide range of organized sessions. Please refer the symposium webpage (http://www-dsc.mech.eng.osaka-u.ac.jp/ISFA2014/) for details.

Location
Awaji Yumebutai International Conference Center, Awaji-Island
- the place is a resort and conference center surrounded by a rich natural environment. In cooperation with the adjoining The Westin Awaji Island, we offer a wide variety of options for your activities and parties that you cannot experience anywhere else but in Awaji. The location is easily accessible from Kobe and Osaka Public Bus services from the Kansai International Airport also offer an easy access to the conference center.

Paper Submission
All papers should be written in English. Both long and short papers will be considered. A long paper is from 6 to 8 proceedings pages and a short paper is no more than 4 pages (about 1,000 words per page). The detailed submission policy is found in the conference web page.

Important Dates
December 20, 2013
Paper Submission Deadline
